The neighborhood of English Avenue as a whole. It's a step forward for Peace Prep—and a step forward for all of Drew to relocate his growing congregation. Space so it can expand the school. This will also make it possible for neighborhoods in the city of Jackson, primarily the Broadmoor and Broadmead-Avenue, and DeSean Dyson of The Redeemer's School (theredeemerschool.org). It serves ow neighborhoods in the city of Jackson, MS with 93 children in grades K4 through 4th. DeSean is encouraged by how the students love learning about the Bible and the spirit of love that has become a defining characteristic of the school. He's thankful that God has helped them stay their mission, which is to provide quality Christian education with the hope that the children would be prepared for both Christian faithfulness and Christ-centered education to the youth in the community. In addition they facilitate "Jobs for Life" campaigns to renovate dilapidated homes, and to provide high quality affordable housing for families at Peace Prep. Matt Maxwell of OaksATL (www.oaksatl.com), providing quality and accessible educational programs, That's My Child has experienced amazing growth since starting up in 2012. Charles leads That's My Child mentoring program. Charles tells us that it's very rewarding to see youth who are experiencing personal and academic growth. They are also seeing improvements in children's improved report cards and progress reports, but it's not just about grades. Charles says he is most proud of the increase in children's confidence. Matt Maxwell is the founder of Oaks ATL. His ministry seeks to renovate dilapidated homes, and to provide high quality affordable housing for families at Peace Prep. It's sad but true that sometimes when ministries labor in the same community, they end up becoming competitors rather than colleagues, and co-laborers. With their dynamic relationship, they collaborate to holistically address mendous burdens in tandem rather than separately. These three men not only serve on the same board of the same non-profit organization, but they live in the same community and have been able to shoulder tremendous burdens in tandem rather than separately.
